This workshop is funded by:

Louisiana Developmental Disabilities Council

Hosted by Liz Gary, Coordinator
Partners in Policymaking

All individuals with disabilities and their family members (as well as professionals who are involved with the family) are interested in seeing themselves or their son/daughter/relative be successful in life. Although none of us can predict the future, we can look at ways and means to better prepare for the future by understanding the impact of friendships in our lives. Sociologists call this "social capital" and it is amazing what our relationships do for us. Learning objectives are:

- Participants will understand the historical treatments experienced by people/families experiencing disability
- Folks will be introduced to community approach
- Major aspects of friendships will be overviewed
- 4 key steps to developing more friendships
